GUEST FACULTY

Barry Posner is Professor of Leadership at Santa Clara University where he served for 12 years as Dean of the Business School. His groundbreaking research with Jim Kouzes combines keen insights with practical applications, and captures both why and how leadership is everyone's business. Barry is an internationally renowned scholar who has co-authored eight books on leadership and published more than 85 research and practitioner-oriented articles, Barry is considered one of today's leadership gurus, is listed as one of the top 50 leadership coaches in the United States, and is recognized as one of the 15 most influential Human Resource thinkers worldwide.

Rick Lash is the Hay Group Director of the North American Leadership and Talent Practice. Rick holds a doctorate in psychology and is a registered psychologist and a certified executive coach. He has over 20 years experience in the design and implementation of organizational change interventions which increase performance at the individual, team and corporate level, and is widely recognized as an expert in both creating cultures of continuous learning and developing emotional intelligence. Rick is a dynamic conference presenter who has also written several articles for the Globe and Mail's Careers section.

Jacoba Lilius holds a doctorate in Organizational Psychology from the University of Michigan, and is an Assistant Professor in the School of Policy Studies at Queen's University. Her innovative research with the Compassion Lab (www.compassionlab.com) sheds new light on the nature and impact of compassion in work organizations, and has been published in leading management journals such as Administrative Science Quarterly, Harvard Business Review, Human Relations, and Journal of Organizational Behavior.

Penny Paucha is a certified Coach through the Neuroleadership Group, with extensive experience helping healthcare leaders and their teams remove the barriers to stellar results. Prior to consulting, Penny worked as a health professional and manager and has published in the field of optimizing organizational health.

Her evidence-based approach incorporates the latest findings from the field of social neuroscience as well as instinct-based assessment and proven models of leadership development.

PROGRAM LEADERS

The facilitators for the Institute are a team of outstanding leaders with extensive experience dealing with leadership changes.

Beverley Simpson is an organizational consultant specializing in People, Teams and Systems development in health care agencies. She has an extensive health care background, broad experience in staff, management, education and project leadership roles, and a wide-ranging network of collegial relationships that sustain her practice and her learning. Bev has developed an in-depth knowledge and expertise in developing professional practice roles and teams, creating successful change initiatives, building strong motivated workgroups and coaching for mentorship and leadership. Bev works with health care agencies, seeking innovative solutions to complex practice and organizational issues.

Judith Skelton-Green has more than 25 years of health leadership experience in widely varied health and educational settings developing and implementing innovative solutions in start-up, rationalization, transition, and downsizing situations. Since the fall of 1995 Judith has been President of TRANSITIONS, a consulting firm specializing in facilitating human and organizational change. She has consulted to over 80 different clients in more than 120 engagements, mostly in the areas of corporate integration, organizational redesign, leadership development, strategic planning, and operational review. Judith is widely published, and is a frequently sought speaker and facilitator.

Julia Ann Scott has 25 years of experience in consulting and health care leadership. In her consulting career she has worked with a diverse range of clients across the healthcare continuum. One of the first nurses in Ontario to graduate with an MBA degree, she has expertise in organizational and business process redesign, lean methodologies, strategic change and leadership development. Julia has held several senior leadership positions, including Vice President at several community hospitals. She is currently Vice President Clinical Programs and Chief Nursing Executive at Markham Stouffville Hospital. She is a Certified Management Consultant.
